Premiere TV Network Launches Writers' Room Program to Champion New Voices

Alpharetta, GA — Premiere TV Network today announced the launch of its Writers' Room Program, a groundbreaking initiative designed to discover, mentor, and showcase new and diverse writing talent for film, television, and digital-first series.

The program, debuting this fall, invites aspiring writers from across the country to submit scripts, treatments, and concepts for potential development and production under the PTN banner. Selected participants will gain direct access to industry mentorship, collaborative workshops, and the opportunity to see their work produced and distributed on the Premiere TV Network platform.

“At PTN, we believe the next wave of groundbreaking stories will come from voices that haven’t always had the opportunity to be heard,” said Alex Mercer, Founder & CEO of Premiere TV Network. “The Writers’ Room Program reflects our mission to lower barriers, amplify fresh perspectives, and build a creator-first ecosystem where talent can thrive.”

The Writers’ Room will focus on:

- Mentorship & Training — Connecting emerging writers with experienced producers and showrunners.
- Diverse Storytelling — Prioritizing stories from underrepresented backgrounds and genres not often seen in mainstream media.
- Production Opportunities — Giving select projects a fast-track to development and distribution on PTN.

With the program, Premiere TV Network continues its commitment to empowering creators while offering audiences compelling, authentic storytelling that resonates with today’s cultural landscape.

Applications for the Writers’ Room Program open September 2025 at mypremieretv.com/writers.
